Edith Maraquita Harford

Emma Christiana Harriet Harford⁷ was born in 1828, was christened on 6 Mar 1828 in Holy Trinity Church, Stapleton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, and was buried on 26 Apr 1831 in Holy Trinity Church, Stapleton, Bristol, Gloucestershire.

Henry Charles Harford⁷ was born in 1829 and was christened on 2 Jan 1830 in Holy Trinity Church, Stapleton, Bristol, Gloucestershire. He never married and had no children.

Rev. Canon Frederick Kill Harford⁷ was born in 1832 in Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, was christened on 6 Mar 1832 in St. Andrew's Church, Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, and died on 11 Nov 1906 in 4A Dean's Yard, Westminster, London. He never married and had no children.

Basic notes:

He was awarded with MA FSA. The name Kill is derived from his father's paternal grandmother, Hannah Kill. He was educated at Rugby. He worked as a Curate of Croydon in Croydon, Surrey. He worked as a Minor Canon of Westminster. He worked as a Founder of the Guild of St. Cecilia in 1891. The purpose of his organisation, was to provide music therapy to hospital patients in late-Victorian England. Initially it drew a lot of support, including that of Florence Nightingale. Sadly, it failed to draw the financial support for long term survival and eventually, a century before its time, it fizzled out. He worked as a Poet and Hymnist. He was a friend and correspondent of Gustave Doré and a possible acquaintance of James McNeill Whistler. He lived at 4A Dean's Yard, Westminster, London.

Capt. Samuel Henry Harford⁷ was born on 20 Apr 1833 in Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, was christened on 6 Jun 1833 in St. Andrew's Church, Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, and died in 1904.

Basic notes:

He worked as an Ensign of the 36th Foot. Transfers to the 56th by exchange, 31 October 1851. He worked as a Lieutenant of the 56th Essex Regiment in 1856.

This covers the latter phase of the Crimean campaign in which he saw service. He worked as a Vice-Consul before 1870 in Sebastopol, Crimea, Ukraine. He worked as a H.M. Consul before 1890 in Sebastopol, Crimea, Ukraine. He worked as a H.M. Consul from 1890 to 1892 in Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Canary Islands. He worked as a H.M. Consul from 1895 to 1898 in Nouméa, Grande Terre, New Caledonia. He worked as a H.M. Consul on 11 Nov 1898 in Manila, Philippines. He had expected to return to Nouméa from leave, but instead was despatched to Manila. Miscellaneous: Some state that he was born in about 1815 and died in 1914. That is nonsense. Samuel Henry's eldest sibling, (Charles Joseph Harford) was born in 1826.... when their mother would only have been 11 years of age. As it was, their parents did not marry until 1825 when aged 27 and 24.

Just as his birth and christening records show, Samuel Henry Harford was born 20th April and christened 6th June 1833, which is supported by the more faithful, Annals of the Harford Family, (Alice Mary Elizabeth Harford - 1909).

The same text mentions his later being a member of the consular service and gives his death as having occurred in 1904. Would the above family book readily state his death as 1914, were he still living? I am not confident however, that the book treats the record accurately when it gives his death as d.s.p.

(Decessit sine prole), for there was, as again the records show, a child, a son, who was born in 1870 when his father was serving as Vice-Consul in Sebastopol and who was baptised with the name Alexandrika. Samuel Henry's wife died at Yalta, the following year. Whether their son lived long enough to make his mark upon the world, is as yet unknown. But if not, then d.s.p. ought at least be d.s.p.s.

As to the whereabouts of Samuel Henry Harford's death, I find no record as yet, for either 1904 or 1914. He was appointed H.M. Consul to Manila in 1898, when aged 65 and it seems improbable that he retained his office for another six years.

Emma Christiana Harriet Harford⁷ was born in 1828, was christened on 6 Mar 1828 in Holy Trinity Church, Stapleton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, and was buried on 26 Apr 1831 in Holy Trinity Church, Stapleton, Bristol, Gloucestershire.

Henry Charles Harford⁷ was born in 1829 and was christened on 2 Jan 1830 in Holy Trinity Church, Stapleton, Bristol, Gloucestershire. He never married and had no children.

Rev. Canon Frederick Kill Harford⁷ was born in 1832 in Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, was christened on 6 Mar 1832 in St. Andrew's Church, Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, and died on 11 Nov 1906 in 4A Dean's Yard, Westminster, London. He never married and had no children.

Basic notes:

He was awarded with MA FSA. The name Kill is derived from his father's paternal grandmother, Hannah Kill. He was educated at Rugby. He worked as a Curate of Croydon in Croydon, Surrey. He worked as a Minor Canon of Westminster. He worked as a Founder of the Guild of St. Cecilia in 1891. The purpose of his organisation, was to provide music therapy to hospital patients in late-Victorian England. Initially it drew a lot of support, including that of Florence Nightingale. Sadly, it failed to draw the financial support for long term survival and eventually, a century before its time, it fizzled out. He worked as a Poet and Hymnist. He was a friend and correspondent of Gustave Doré and a possible acquaintance of James McNeill Whistler. He lived at 4A Dean's Yard, Westminster, London.

Capt. Samuel Henry Harford⁷ was born on 20 Apr 1833 in Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, was christened on 6 Jun 1833 in St. Andrew's Church, Clifton, Bristol, Gloucestershire, and died in 1904.

Basic notes:

He worked as an Ensign of the 36th Foot. Transfers to the 56th by exchange, 31 October 1851. He worked as a Lieutenant of the 56th Essex Regiment in 1856.

This covers the latter phase of the Crimean campaign in which he saw service. He worked as a Vice-Consul before 1870 in Sebastopol, Crimea, Ukraine. He worked as a H.M. Consul before 1890 in Sebastopol, Crimea, Ukraine. He worked as a H.M. Consul from 1890 to 1892 in Santa Cruz de Tenerife, Canary Islands. He worked as a H.M. Consul from 1895 to 1898 in Nouméa, Grande Terre, New Caledonia. He worked as a H.M. Consul on 11 Nov 1898 in Manila, Philippines. He had expected to return to Nouméa from leave, but instead was despatched to Manila. Miscellaneous: Some state that he was born in about 1815 and died in 1914. That is nonsense. Samuel Henry's eldest sibling, (Charles Joseph Harford) was born in 1826.... when their mother would only have been 11 years of age. As it was, their parents did not marry until 1825 when aged 27 and 24.

Just as his birth and christening records show, Samuel Henry Harford was born 20th April and christened 6th June 1833, which is supported by the more faithful, Annals of the Harford Family, (Alice Mary Elizabeth Harford - 1909).

The same text mentions his later being a member of the consular service and gives his death as having occurred in 1904. Would the above family book readily state his death as 1914, were he still living? I am not confident however, that the book treats the record accurately when it gives his death as d.s.p.

(Decessit sine prole), for there was, as again the records show, a child, a son, who was born in 1870 when his father was serving as Vice-Consul in Sebastopol and who was baptised with the name Alexandrika. Samuel Henry's wife died at Yalta, the following year. Whether their son lived long enough to make his mark upon the world, is as yet unknown. But if not, then d.s.p. ought at least be d.s.p.s.

As to the whereabouts of Samuel Henry Harford's death, I find no record as yet, for either 1904 or 1914. He was appointed H.M. Consul to Manila in 1898, when aged 65 and it seems improbable that he retained his office for another six years.

Coffin Bay and Greenly Island in the Eyre Peninsula region of South Australia were named in honor of Sir Isaac Coffin by the British explorer Matthew Flinders in 1802. The Coffin Bay National Park also bears his name. He worked as a Member of Parliament for Ilchester from 1818 to 1826. He worked as an Admiral of the Blue.

Isaac married Elizabeth Browne Greenly,⁴ daughter of William Greenly and Unknown, on 3 Apr 1811. Elizabeth died on 27 Jan 1839 in Cheltenham, Gloucestershire.

Marriage Notes: He married Elizabeth Browne [Greenly], but within a few years satisfied of their utter incompatibility, they very amicably, on both sides, arranged for independence of each other. She was said to be addicted to writing sermons at night to the disturbance of the slumber of her rollicking spouse. The fault was certainly not hers, for she was a clever and exemplary woman. She lived nearly as long as he did, but they rarely met, though he made repeated overtures to reconciliation, some rather amusing. It is the reasonable ambition of all Englishmen, whose conditions and circumstances justify such aspirations, to be permitted to take part in the legislation and government of the country, and when Sir Isaac's health and peace rendered active service in the navy no longer desirable, his wish was gratified by his return to Parliament in 1818 for the borough of Ilchester for which he sat till 1826. His reputation and experience, gave considerable weight to his opinion when he took part as he frequently did in debates on naval affairs. He was tall, robust, but of symmetrical proportions, his voice powerful, and his countenance expressive and noble. Sir Isaac died at Cheltenham in Gloucestershire, June 23, 1839, at the age of 80. Lady Coffin preceded him to the tomb on the 27th of January that year.

On 31st July, 1917 at Westhock, [Westhoek] Belgium, when his command was held up in attack owing to heavy machine-gun and rifle fire. Brigadier-General Coffin went forward and made an inspection of his front posts. Although under the heaviest fire from both machine-guns and rifles and in full view of the enemy, he showed an utter disregard of personal danger, walking quietly from shell-hole to shell-hole giving advice and cheering his men by his presence. His gallant conduct had the greatest effect on all ranks and it was largely owing to his personal courage and example that the shell-hole line was held.

Basic notes:

He worked as a Physician. Thomas Story Kirkbride, MD., LLd., eldest son of John and Elizabeth (Story) Kirkbride, was born near Morrisville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, at the paternal home on the banks of the Delaware, July 31, 1809. After attending schools in the neighborhood of his home, he spent four years at a noted classical school in Trenton, New Jersey, and afterwards devoted one year to the special study of higher mathematics at Burlington, New Jersey. The following year he spent on his father's farm in practical pursuits, which in later years he felt to have been of permanent advantage to his health. At the close of the year he read medicine with Dr. Nicholas Belleville, a distinguished physician and surgeon at Trenton, New Jersey, who had come from France with the forces under Marquis de Lafayette, during the American Revolution. Dr. Kirkbride graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1832, and was immediately appointed Resident Physician at the Friends Asylum for the Insane, at Frankford, Philadelphia, remaining there one year. Dr. Kirkbride was noted from the first for his active interest in everything relating to the care of the patients and the management of the institution. On leaving the Friends' Asylum he received a flattering testimonial from the Board of Managers, and also from individual members of the Board a confidential request to return and take charge of the Asylum. In 1833 he was elected Resident Physician at the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he remained two years. During his second year, his colleague was Dr. William W. Gerhard, and both were diligent in the careful examination and noting of all cases under treatment; their observations, published separately, were among the early Hospital clinical reports issued in this country. In 1835 Dr. Kirkbride began general practice in Philadelphia and looked forward to devoting himself to surgery. He was a constant visitor at the Pennsylvania Hospital, keeping up his intimacy with the Medical Staff there engaged. The resignation of his friend, Dr. John Rhea Barton, led him to anticipate an appointment as his successor as Surgeon to the Hospital in the autumn of 1840. One summer morning, when walking in Race street, he met his friend, John Paul, an active member of the Board of Managers, who, to his entire surprise, asked him what would induce him to relinquish his long cherished plans and accept instead the office of Physician-in-Chief and Superintendent of the new Department for the Insane. It was a matter for serious consideration; his professional friends regarded the change as ill-advised, indeed as almost without justification. On the other hand, in the opportunity of starting a new institution, of developing new forms of management, and, in fact, of giving a new character to the care for the insane. Dr. Kirkbride finally saw inducements to forego his prospects of distinction as a surgeon. Without any solicitation, or even application, on his part, he was elected on October 12, 1840, to the post which he occupied until his death. After visiting institutions for the insane to the north and east of Philadelphia, he moved the following December, with his family, to the old mansion house within the Hospital grounds. From this time Dr. Kirkbride's ability and varied gifts were consecrated to the insane. His energy and enthusiasm never flagged and his duties kept him always at his post. His forty-two Annual Reports give the record of his life. They are at once the history of the institution over which he presided and the story of his untiring service. So completely indeed is his career identified with the medical care and cure of the insane in hospital, that some knowledge of this subject is necessary for any true conception of his character and work. He represented a great idea which he found worthy of life-long devotion. Eyes trained by knowledge to see his own ideal and to descry the hospital of the future as it stood before his vision, can alone perceive the value or the meaning of his labors. His earliest reports are peculiarly interesting as character studies. Written shortly after he entered the specialty, they reveal marvellous maturity of thought and firm grasp of the latest principals in the care of the insane, while the entire series of Reports form a valuable treatise on insanity and the relations of the community to the insane. Dr. Kirkbride was a pioneer in the movement for new and humane methods of treating the insane. In his early reports he insists that insanity should be considered a disease like other serious diseases, with equal hope of recovery. To emphasize this idea he urged the use of the name Hospital instead of Asylum. Bleeding and other debilitating treatment was given up entirely, restraint was seldom resorted to, comfortable and attractive rooms and wards took the place of the cells of an earlier day; the care-takers of the insane, instead of being "keepers" were attendants and nurses, and unvarying kindness and sympathy were made the rule of the Hospital. The beautiful grounds of the Hospital, in whose improvement Dr. Kirkbride took so keen an interest, were also felt to have their place in the moral treatment of the insane, together with the occupations and amusements which were provided for all those able to take part in them. The regular evening amusements, such as gymnastic drills, lectures, readings, magic-lantern exhibitions, (introduced as early as 1844) Dr. Kirkbride himself never failed to attend. Within the wards of the Hospital he found delight in the exercise of that benign power over the insane in which he was unrivalled. To know him thoroughly one needed to see him surrounded by those to whom his life was devoted. Dignity, tempered by gentleness, invariable courtesy, tenderest sympathy and tact, marked all his intercourse with his patients. His "tranquil grace of tone and look" and manner, his wonderful patience and his genial disposition brought healing influences, which were strengthened by the resolute firmness, the unyielding perseverance and the fortitude of his character. The sane and the insane recognized within him a rare spiritual force. In 1854 the wards were so overcrowded that further admissions were necessarily refused. He then suggested the erection of a separate building for men only, and published an "Appeal for the Insane," besides writing many articles for newspapers on the subject. He imparted his own enthusiasm to others, and many citizens, including the whole Board of Managers, threw themselves most heartily into the work. For thirty years, although not always prominently before the public, his counsel was constantly sought by the medical societies and successive Legislatures of Pennsylvania, in every movement relating to the care of the insane. His yearly Reports and his work on the Construction of Hospitals for the Insane, are his principal writings, but he contributed essays, reviews and notices to the medical journals and wrote frequently for newspapers, especially the old United States Gazette, and North American. Memoirs of his valued friends, Dr. William Pepper Sr., Professor of Theory and Practice in the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Isaac Ray, the author of the "Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity" were written by request of the College of Physicians. Dr. Kirkbride was one of the "original thirteen" physicians who, in 1844, founded the Association of Medical Superintendents, now the American Medico-Psychological Association. He was its first secretary, serving seven years; its vice-president for seven years, and its president from 1862 to 1870; he took the greatest interest in its proceedings, and was rarely absent from its meetings. He was a Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia; a member of the Philadelphia County Medical Society; Franklin Institute; Historical Society of Pennsylvania; American Philosophical Society; and an honorary member of the British Medico-Psychological Association, etc. He was for ten years a trustee of the State Lunatic Asylum at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and for more than forty years a manager of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind. In 1880 Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. In 1880, after recovering from a severe illness of several months, he returned, with renewed ardor, to his accustomed work. In March, 1883, he was prostrated by typhoid-pneumonia; his illness lasted nine months, and he died peacefully, December 16, 1883, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. The late Professor S. D. Gross, in his Autobiography, thus described Dr. Kirkbride's appearance; "In personal appearance Dr. Kirkbride was eminently attractive. He was of medium height, with a fine physique, a well-shaped head, and a countenance highly expressive of benevolence and warmth of heart. His voice was sweet and gentle, and his presence and demeanor were such as to win at once the affection and confidence of his most wayward patients." One of his oldest assistants, Dr. John Curwen, wrote of him as follows: "Laboring with a single aim for the relief and welfare of those to whose care he had devoted more than forty years of his life, he has left behind him in what he has written and in what he has done, a monument which will stand so long as the care of the insane will require the aid of those institutions with which his name and his fame have been so closely connected." By resolution of the Board of Managers, an extended Memorial of Dr. Kirkbride's life was published with the annual report of the Hospital, to the contributors for the year 1883. At a special meeting of the board of managers of the Hospital, held December 17, 1883, a minute was adopted and resolutions expressive of their sense of the great loss they had sustained and of their estimation of the value of his services; they also directed that a tablet be placed in the Centre Hall of the Department for Women, bearing the following inscription:

Basic notes:

He worked as a Physician. Thomas Story Kirkbride, MD., LLd., eldest son of John and Elizabeth (Story) Kirkbride, was born near Morrisville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, at the paternal home on the banks of the Delaware, July 31, 1809. After attending schools in the neighborhood of his home, he spent four years at a noted classical school in Trenton, New Jersey, and afterwards devoted one year to the special study of higher mathematics at Burlington, New Jersey. The following year he spent on his father's farm in practical pursuits, which in later years he felt to have been of permanent advantage to his health. At the close of the year he read medicine with Dr. Nicholas Belleville, a distinguished physician and surgeon at Trenton, New Jersey, who had come from France with the forces under Marquis de Lafayette, during the American Revolution. Dr. Kirkbride graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1832, and was immediately appointed Resident Physician at the Friends Asylum for the Insane, at Frankford, Philadelphia, remaining there one year. Dr. Kirkbride was noted from the first for his active interest in everything relating to the care of the patients and the management of the institution. On leaving the Friends' Asylum he received a flattering testimonial from the Board of Managers, and also from individual members of the Board a confidential request to return and take charge of the Asylum. In 1833 he was elected Resident Physician at the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he remained two years. During his second year, his colleague was Dr. William W. Gerhard, and both were diligent in the careful examination and noting of all cases under treatment; their observations, published separately, were among the early Hospital clinical reports issued in this country. In 1835 Dr. Kirkbride began general practice in Philadelphia and looked forward to devoting himself to surgery. He was a constant visitor at the Pennsylvania Hospital, keeping up his intimacy with the Medical Staff there engaged. The resignation of his friend, Dr. John Rhea Barton, led him to anticipate an appointment as his successor as Surgeon to the Hospital in the autumn of 1840. One summer morning, when walking in Race street, he met his friend, John Paul, an active member of the Board of Managers, who, to his entire surprise, asked him what would induce him to relinquish his long cherished plans and accept instead the office of Physician-in-Chief and Superintendent of the new Department for the Insane. It was a matter for serious consideration; his professional friends regarded the change as ill-advised, indeed as almost without justification. On the other hand, in the opportunity of starting a new institution, of developing new forms of management, and, in fact, of giving a new character to the care for the insane. Dr. Kirkbride finally saw inducements to forego his prospects of distinction as a surgeon. Without any solicitation, or even application, on his part, he was elected on October 12, 1840, to the post which he occupied until his death. After visiting institutions for the insane to the north and east of Philadelphia, he moved the following December, with his family, to the old mansion house within the Hospital grounds. From this time Dr. Kirkbride's ability and varied gifts were consecrated to the insane. His energy and enthusiasm never flagged and his duties kept him always at his post. His forty-two Annual Reports give the record of his life. They are at once the history of the institution over which he presided and the story of his untiring service. So completely indeed is his career identified with the medical care and cure of the insane in hospital, that some knowledge of this subject is necessary for any true conception of his character and work. He represented a great idea which he found worthy of life-long devotion. Eyes trained by knowledge to see his own ideal and to descry the hospital of the future as it stood before his vision, can alone perceive the value or the meaning of his labors. His earliest reports are peculiarly interesting as character studies. Written shortly after he entered the specialty, they reveal marvellous maturity of thought and firm grasp of the latest principals in the care of the insane, while the entire series of Reports form a valuable treatise on insanity and the relations of the community to the insane. Dr. Kirkbride was a pioneer in the movement for new and humane methods of treating the insane. In his early reports he insists that insanity should be considered a disease like other serious diseases, with equal hope of recovery. To emphasize this idea he urged the use of the name Hospital instead of Asylum. Bleeding and other debilitating treatment was given up entirely, restraint was seldom resorted to, comfortable and attractive rooms and wards took the place of the cells of an earlier day; the care-takers of the insane, instead of being "keepers" were attendants and nurses, and unvarying kindness and sympathy were made the rule of the Hospital. The beautiful grounds of the Hospital, in whose improvement Dr. Kirkbride took so keen an interest, were also felt to have their place in the moral treatment of the insane, together with the occupations and amusements which were provided for all those able to take part in them. The regular evening amusements, such as gymnastic drills, lectures, readings, magic-lantern exhibitions, (introduced as early as 1844) Dr. Kirkbride himself never failed to attend. Within the wards of the Hospital he found delight in the exercise of that benign power over the insane in which he was unrivalled. To know him thoroughly one needed to see him surrounded by those to whom his life was devoted. Dignity, tempered by gentleness, invariable courtesy, tenderest sympathy and tact, marked all his intercourse with his patients. His "tranquil grace of tone and look" and manner, his wonderful patience and his genial disposition brought healing influences, which were strengthened by the resolute firmness, the unyielding perseverance and the fortitude of his character. The sane and the insane recognized within him a rare spiritual force. In 1854 the wards were so overcrowded that further admissions were necessarily refused. He then suggested the erection of a separate building for men only, and published an "Appeal for the Insane," besides writing many articles for newspapers on the subject. He imparted his own enthusiasm to others, and many citizens, including the whole Board of Managers, threw themselves most heartily into the work. For thirty years, although not always prominently before the public, his counsel was constantly sought by the medical societies and successive Legislatures of Pennsylvania, in every movement relating to the care of the insane. His yearly Reports and his work on the Construction of Hospitals for the Insane, are his principal writings, but he contributed essays, reviews and notices to the medical journals and wrote frequently for newspapers, especially the old United States Gaette, and North American. Memoirs of his valued friends. Dr. William Pepper Sr., Professor of Theory and Practice in the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Isaac Ray, the author of the "Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity" were written by request of the College of Physicians. Dr. Kirkbride was one of the "original thirteen" physicians who, in 1844, founded the Association of Medical Superintendents, now the American Medico-Psychological Association. He was its first secretary, serving seven years; its vice-president for seven years, and its president from 1862 to 1870; he took the greatest interest in its proceedings, and was rarely absent from its meetings. He was a Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia; a member of the Philadelphia County Medical Society; Franklin Institute; Historical Society of Pennsylvania; American Philosophical Society ; and an honorary member of the British Medico- Psychological Association, etc. He was for ten years a trustee of the State Lunatic Asylum at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and for more than forty years a manager of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind. In 1880 Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. In 1880, after recovering from a severe illness of several months, he returned, with renewed ardor, to his accustomed work. In March, 1883, he was prostrated by typhoid-pneumonia ; his illness lasted nine months, and he died peacefully, December 16, 1883, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. The late Professor S. D. Gross, in his Autobiography, thus described Dr. Kirkbride's appearance; "In personal appearance Dr. Kirkbride was eminently attractive. He was of medium height, with a fine physique, a well-shaped head, and a countenance highly expressive of benevolence and warmth of heart. His voice was sweet and gentle, and his presence and demeanor were such as to win at once the affection and confidence of his most wayward patients." One of his oldest assistants. Dr. John Curwen, wrote of him as follows: "Laboring with a single aim for the relief and welfare of those to whose care he had devoted more than forty years of his life, he has left behind him in what he has written and in what he has done, a monument which will stand so long as the care of the insane will require the aid of those institutions with which his name and his fame have been so closely connected." By resolution of the Board of Managers, an extended Memorial of Dr. Kirkbride's life was published with the annual report of the Hospital, to the contributors for the year 1883. At a special meeting of the board of managers of the Hospital, held December 17. 1883, a minute was adopted and resolutions expressive of their sense of the great loss they had sustained and of their estimation of the value of his services ; they also directed that a tablet be placed in the Centre Hall of the Department for Women, bearing the following inscription :
