After serving his apprenticeship with Robert Stephenson & Co., at Newcastle on Tyne, he embarked independently and with his brother, established the Thornaby iron works of Stockton. Blast furnaces, rolling mills and machine shops were built up with extrordianry rapidity for an English operation. Trade was extended by Whitwell throughout the world, for he was connected with all commercial points of the continent, in the far Orient, in the United States and the Dominion of Canada. The young iron-master invented all sorts and kinds of labor saving devices in blast furnace construction, among them being the Whitwell stove, that eventually led the trade in every country where the production of raw ironreached the stage of marked commercial development. Whitwell was the founder of the Cleveland Institute of Engineers and its first president. He was the great authority of the world at that time, on blast furnace construction.....
The Story of Coal and Iron in Alabama, by Ethel Armes, re-published in 2011 by the University of Alabama Press. He worked as a Secretary of the YMCA 1861 to 1878 in Stockton on Tees, County Durham. He worked as a Founder and President of the Cleveland Institute of Engineers 15th Sept. 1864. He worked as a helper to the Friends' War Victim's Fund 1870 to 1871 in France. Helping those afflicted by the consequences of the Franco-Prussian War. He worked as a Partner in the Southern States Coal, Iron and Land Company. Miscellaneous: Travel. He visted America twice, combining work and visiting YMCA groups when he was able to do so. He is accorded in a glowing tribute in the autobiography written by his friend James Bowron (1844-1928), whose text can be found archived at the University of Alabama, in America.
